freebeats: In The Wildwoods

Seeking specimens of differing size for the aquarium, Barnes drove his truck to the ocean at 28th and Ocean every other night. "Most times I would not find a thing, but sometimes I would find a lot," he said. "I would get there and there would be a lot of people standing around looking at the ocean. I'd ask them what was going on, and they'd say, 'Nothing.' I'd say, 'Then why are you looking?' They'd say, 'We're looking for the sea monster.' I'd tell them I was looking for specimens." Unbeknownst to Barnes, he was the sea monster. He went on to become the aquarium's director and, eventually, its owner. He died in 1988, at the age of 78. Again, Rosenbaum was the manager. Until then and ever since, he has been the sea monster.

I have never been a Wildwoods fan. The hourly dramas weren't for the meek, a long ride in transit, about 90 miles round. All I knew of it was intermittently from my parents' stories, and from the occasional visit to my grandparents' condo in Cape May, which was a 45 minute drive from the Wildwoods. The wide beaches, I'm told, are among the most pristine on the east coast of America, so the ocean and sand are probably the best part of the Wildwoods. But I've never been to the beach there.

Exit 4 Route 47 Delsea Area Drive, Cannon Ave sign on way to the city. A departure point, but also marking the start of the 1950 Miss America Crossroads Highway, which runs from Cape May to Atlantic City. Cape May is the southernmost point in New Jersey, and the highway runs north from there, through Wildwood, Wildwood Crest, Ocean City, Somers Point, Margate City, Longport, Ventnor City, Atlantic City, Absecon, Pleasantville, Egg Harbor Township, Hammonton, Folsom, Buena, Vineland, Millville, Bridgeton, Elmer, Woodstown, Pennsville, Penns Grove, and Salem City. Wildwood City is the furthest west you can drive on the island. The Wildwoods are the only part of the island that's not a peninsula. Instead, it's a barrier island, which is a long, narrow island that runs parallel to the mainland coast.

Wildwood's streets run the ocean and cross the off-season by gallon until the city. I own a couple of people sitting at benches in the Crossroads Complex and, at least, not speaking about the streets. The Wildwoods Boardwalk is the longest in the world, at 2.5 miles. It's also the widest, at 150 feet. Its planks are made out of hot iron, and they are a lot more comfortable. It has all kinds of rides to entertain you, and it has all kinds of people to entertain you. The rides are more concentrated at the south end, and the people are more concentrated at the north end. The rides are more concentrated at the south end because that's where the Morey's Piers are. Morey's Piers are three piers that are connected by a tramway. The tramway runs above the boardwalk. It's the only tramway on the boardwalk. Morey's Piers are the only piers on the boardwalk. The piers are the only piers on the boardwalk that have rides on them. The rides on the piers are the only rides on the boardwalk that are not on the ground. The rides on the ground are the only rides on the boardwalk that are not on the piers. The rides on the piers are the only rides on the boardwalk that are not on the ground. The rides on the ground are the only rides on the boardwalk that are not on the piers.
